

New Zealand

Cook Islands

- 👤 Population: 8,600
- 📏 Area: 91 sq miles (236 sq km)

The 15 Cook Islands are spread far and wide across 772,000 sq miles (2 million sq km) of South Pacific Ocean. The main exports of this self-governing territory are pearls and fish.

Niue

- 👤 Population: 2,000
- 📏 Area: 100 sq miles (260 sq km)

Known as the "Rock of Polynesia," Niue is located 1,500 miles (2,400 km) off the coast of New Zealand. Its rugged interior is made up of cliffs, chasms, and forests.

Tokelau

- 👤 Population: 1,600
- 📏 Area: 4.5 sq miles (12 sq km)

The three tiny coral atolls of Atafu, Fakaofo, and Nukunonu make up this territory in the South Pacific Ocean. Many of the population make their living by farming or fishing.

Red-footed boobies nest on Pacific islands.

Norway

Bouvet Island

- 👤 Population: 0
- 📏 Area: 19 sq miles (49 sq km)

Situated in the south Atlantic Ocean, Bouvet Island is covered in ice. It is a nature reserve known for its penguin and seal populations.

Jan Mayen

- 👤 Population: 0
- 📏 Area: 145 sq miles (377 sq km)

Between Greenland and Norway in the Atlantic Ocean is the small volcanic island of Jan Mayen. Scientists visit this uninhabited territory to study the glacial terrain and stormy weather.

Peter I Island

- 👤 Population: 0
- 📏 Area: 69 sq miles (180 sq km)

A 19th-century Russian explorer named this volcanic island after Russian Tsar Peter I. This uninhabited territory in the Bellingshausen Sea is visited by petrels, terns, penguins, and seals.

Svalbard

- 👤 Population: 2,900
- 📏 Area: 23,950 sq miles (62,045 sq km)

Nine islands form this archipelago in the Arctic Ocean north of Norway. Known for its snowy mountain peaks and glaciers, it is home to polar bears, reindeer, and Arctic foxes.

United Kingdom

Anguilla

- 👤 Population: 18,100
- 📏 Area: 35 sq miles (91 sq km)

This beautiful island in the Caribbean Sea was named after the French word anguille for "eel" because of its long, narrow shape. White-sand beaches and pretty islets attract many tourists.

Sailboats race each other during the Anguilla Summer Festival.

Sailing is a national sport in Anguilla.

Ascension Island

- 👤 Population: 800
- 📏 Area: 35 sq miles (91 sq km)

Roughly halfway between Brazil and Africa in the Atlantic Ocean is this small volcanic island once visited by celebrated British naturalist Charles Darwin. Green Mountain is the tallest peak on Ascension Island at 2,818 ft (859 m).

Bermuda

- 👤 Population: 71,700
- 📏 Area: 21 sq miles (54 sq km)

Known for its pinkish-sand beaches, Bermuda is made up of seven Atlantic Ocean islands connected by bridges. It has a high number of wrecks in its waters, caused by ships hitting hidden coral reefs around its coastline.

Divers flock to the Bermuda coast to explore its shipwrecks.

British Indian Ocean Territory

- 👤 Population: 0
- 📏 Area: 23 sq miles (60 sq km)

Lying in the middle of the Indian Ocean, this archipelago of 58 tropical islands serves as a military base. Its only visitors are military staff.

British Virgin Islands

- 👤 Population: 37,400
- 📏 Area: 58 sq miles (151 sq km)

The clear, blue waters and warm, subtropical climate of these Caribbean islands make them very popular with tourists.