

Indigenous peoples of the Amazon

The world's largest rain forest provides a home for hundreds of indigenous peoples. The Xingu, made up of many ethnic groups, live and fish by the Xingu River.

Blue-and-yellow macaw

The Amazon rainforest is a sanctuary for this big, bright parrot that lives in the canopies of trees and feeds on the bountiful fruits.

Rio de Janeiro

Christ the Redeemer, the iconic 98 ft (30 m) tall statue, overlooks Rio and its beaches, including Copacabana, and the pointy Sugarloaf Mountain.

Coffee production

One-third of the world's coffee beans is grown in Brazil. Traditional producers toss the beans on mesh screens to separate the branches and leaves from the ripe fruit.

Acrobatic martial art

Capoeira is a martial-art form that combines self-defense, acrobatics, and dance. It was developed here in the 16th century by enslaved Africans.
