

Egypt

City of minarets

Built amid ancient cities, Egypt's teeming capital, Cairo, is more than 1,000 years old. Its historic center has spectacular Islamic architecture, showcased in the 14th-century Sultan Hassan Mosque.

Sweet fruits

Dates have been cultivated and eaten in Egypt since ancient times. More than 15 percent of the world's dates are grown here, making Egypt one of the top producers.

Magnificent treasures

More than 5,000 years ago, a great civilization was growing along the banks of the Nile River. We know about life in ancient Egypt from the extraordinary discoveries of archaeologists, such as this well-preserved coffin for an elderly woman named Nesmutaatneru.

Hieroglyphs are an ancient form of writing in which pictures and symbols represent sounds and ideas.

Lying in the northeast corner of Africa, Egypt is more than 90 percent desert. Most Egyptians live in the valley of the fertile Nile River. Thousands of years ago, Egypt was home to one of the world's first great civilizations.

On the ball

Egyptian super striker Mohamed Salah is a two-time winner of the African Footballer of the Year Award. He also plays for England's Liverpool Football Club.

The Libyan Desert is a mostly rocky expanse covering two-thirds of Egypt.

Sailing on the Nile

Egypt depends on the Nile River for water for farming. For thousands of years, it was also the country's main transportation highway. Today, tourists travel on it in wooden sailboats called feluccas.

- 📏 386,662 sq miles (1,001,450 sq km)
- 👤 104.1 million
- ★ Cairo
- 🗣️ Arabic, English, French, Berber