

Chad

Africa

N'Djaména is a port on the Chari River, and the largest city in the country.

Ennedi Massif

Over the centuries, erosion by wind and water has sculpted dramatic rock formations in this sandstone plateau in northeast Chad.

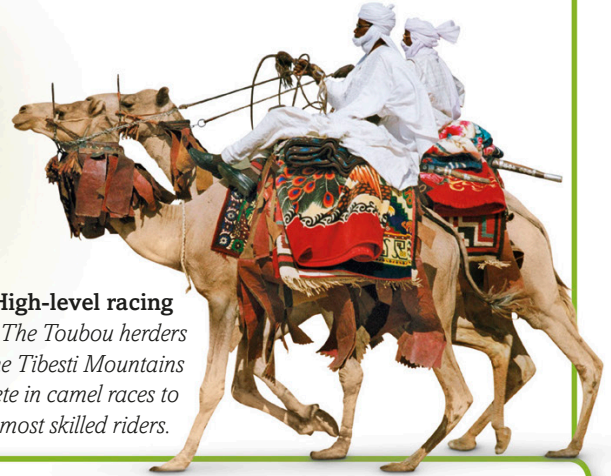

- 495,755 sq miles (1,284,000 sq km)
- 16.9 million
- N'Djaména
- French, Sara, Arabic, Maba

Prehistoric paintings
Ancient rock art, including hundreds of drawings of camels and cattle, is found in the Tibesti Mountains.

High-level racing
The Toubou herders of the Tibesti Mountains compete in camel races to find the most skilled riders.

Chad is located at the heart of north Africa, surrounded by six other nations. The Sahara Desert lies in the north of the country. Most people live in the tropical south, where they farm the land.

Eritrea

Prickly pear

Despite its prickly exterior, this cactus plant grown in Eritrea has sweet orange or red fruit that can be eaten raw.

- 45,406 sq miles (117,600 sq km)
- 6 million
- Asmara
- Tigrinya, English, other languages (+8)

A mountainous country situated on the Red Sea in northeastern Africa, Eritrea takes its name from the Greek for "Red Sea." Eritrea gained independence from Ethiopia in 1993, though conflict continued until 2018.

Holiday islands

Many small islands make up the beautiful Dahlak Archipelago off the coast of Eritrea. Tourist boats and scuba divers visit the clear waters and coral reefs.

Two-towered landmark

Sitting on a hill in the capital, Asmara, is the colorful Enda Mariam Cathedral. Christianity and Islam are the two major religions practiced in Eritrea.

