

Dancing dervishes

Islam is the largest religion in Sudan.

Every Friday at Omdurman, near Khartoum, Muslim mystics called dervishes come together to chant and dance.

Sudan

Africa

- ☑ 718,723 sq miles (1,861,484 sq km)
- 👤 45.6 million
- ★ Khartoum
- 🗨 Arabic, Nubian, Beja, Fur, English

Sudan has had an unsettled past, and in 2011 it split into two nations. Its population is diverse, with many different ethnic groups. Sudan's capital, Khartoum, is the meeting point of the Blue Nile and White Nile rivers.

Walls of sand

Huge dust storms called haboobs often sweep through Sudan. Sand carried from the Sahara Desert blows across the land at high speed.

Sudanese cuisine

Farmers grow a variety of grains, including corn, sorghum, and millet. These are used in popular local dishes.

0 200 km
0 200 miles
(approximate scale)

Kisra is a flatbread made from sorghum and wheat flour.

South Sudan

Boma National Park

Among Africa's largest national parks, Boma provides a grassland habitat for antelope, elephants, giraffes, and lions.

Longhorn cattle are highly valued.

Cattle keepers

The Dinka people in South Sudan lead a traditional herding life.

- ☑ 248,777 sq miles (644,329 sq km)
- 👤 10.6 million
- ★ Juba
- 🗨 Arabic, Dinka, other languages (+6)

After a long civil war, South Sudan voted to become independent from Sudan in 2011. The country has a more African feel than largely Arab Sudan. Its grassy plains and swamps are havens for wildlife.