

Namibia

Africa

Cheetah

With a population of more than 1,400 wild cheetahs, Namibia has the largest number of any country. The Cheetah Conservation Fund at Otjiwarongo protects these rare animals.

Dune 7

Huge sand dunes run across the Namib Desert. The highest is Dune 7, measuring 1,256 ft (383 m) tall.

Windhoek, meaning "windy corner," is Namibia's largest city.

Herero dolls

Women of the Herero ethnic group make traditional dolls by hand, dressing them in decorative outfits that mimic their own colorful dress.

Ovambo people

The largest ethnic group in Namibia, the Ovambo make up more than half of the country's population.

Traditional odelela fabric has red, pink, and black stripes.

The Namib Desert stretches for 1,200 miles (1,900 km) along the coastal plain.

- 📏 318,261 sq miles (824,292 sq km)
- 👤 2.6 million
- ★ Windhoek
- 🌐 Ovambo, Kavango, English, Bergdama, German, Afrikaans

Namibia is situated on the southwest coast of Africa. This vast country of deserts, mountains, and grasslands is almost entirely arid, meaning it is so dry that few plants can grow. It was one of the first countries to protect its environment by law.

Deadvlei

Silhouettes of long-dead trees create a dramatic skyline against the red sands in Deadvlei, which means "dead marsh." This is a white clay pan near Sossusvlei in the center of the country's dunes.