Mangrove conservation

Saltwater-loving mangrove trees form an important swamp ecosystem. Many are found near the capital, Maputo, and Mozambique has committed to conserving these habitats.

Maputo Railway Station

The classically designed building is notable for its grand style. Built in the 20th century, it has a large dome, striking green exteriors, and ornate pillars.

Gorongosa National Park balances wildlife conservation with the needs of local people.

Peri-peri chiles

Small but spicy, these peppers are farmed in Mozambique. They are mixed with garlic and other ingredients to make the popular peri-peri sauce.

Wild warthogs

This large pig species roams the grasslands of the Gorongosa National Park, along with a wide variety of other wildlife.

Star athlete

Mozambican sprinter Maria Mutola is a three-time world champion in the 800 m race and has taken part in six Olympic Games.

Pristine coastline

Mozambique's 1,550-mile (2,500 km) long coastline features coral reefs, pure white sand beaches, and tropical islands.
