

The Trojan War

During a long war with the city of Troy, the Greeks gave the Trojans a huge wooden horse as a gift. But the horse was full of soldiers, who attacked the Trojans as they slept.

These soldiers were called hoplites.

Helmet with nose protector

Strong, bronze metal armour protected the body.

Shield

Some shields were decorated with crests.

These leg guards are called greaves.

Greek mythology

The Greeks told many stories about their gods and goddesses.

Zeus was king of the gods and chief of the 12 gods who lived on Mount Olympus.

Athena was goddess of war, wisdom, and Athens. She helped heroes in battle.

Poseidon was the brother of Zeus and Hades and god of the seas and earthquakes.

Aphrodite was goddess of love and beauty. She loved Ares, the god of war.

Hades was god of the Underworld – the home of the dead in Greek legends.

Warriors

Each city had an army, and war was part of daily life. Soldiers had to buy their own weapons and armour, so they often came from rich families.
