

310–313	Maximius (East)	Last emperors
308–324	Licinius (West)	457–461	Majorian (West)
		457–474	Leo (East)
House of Constantine		461–465	Severus III (West)
(empire reunited)		467–472	Anthemius (West)
306–337	Constantine I	472	Olybrius (West)
337–340	Constantine II	473–474	Glycerius (West)
337–350	Constans	474–480	Julius Nepos (West)
337–361	Constantius II	475–476	Romulus Augustulus
360–363	Julian II		(West)
364–365	Jovian
House of Valentinian		Other claimants to the title
364–375	Valentinian I (West)	From the 3rd century CE, many
364–378	Valens (East)	other men claimed to be emperor,
367–383	Gratian (West)	sometimes ruling whole regions
375–392	Valentinian II (West)	until they were toppled. Here are a few of them.
House of Theodosius		260–269	Postumus
379–395	Theodosius I	269	Marius
	(sole emperor)	268–271	Victorinus
393–408	Arcadius (East)	271–274	Tetricus
395–423	Honorius (West)	286–293	Carausius
402–450	Theodosius II (East)	350–353	Magnentius
423–425	Johannes (West)	360–366	Procopius
425–455	Valentinian III (West)	380–388	Magnus Maximus
450–457	Marcian (East)	392–394	Eugenius
455	Petronius Maximus	407–411	Constantine III
	(West)	409–411	Maximus
455–456	Avitus (West)	411–413	Jovinus

GLADIATOR WHO'S WHO

Andabata ("blind fighter")

An andabata wore a helmet that covered the eyes so that they could not see their opponent, also an andabata. Andabatae were not trained gladiators, but condemned criminals or volunteers made to fight each other to the death. The bloodthirsty public thought it was funny to watch them slashing wildly at the empty air with their swords.

Bestiarius ("beast-fighter")

Someone condemned to fight or be killed by wild animals in an amphitheater. The name was also given to the assistants who looked after the animals.