

Chatting with Harold Wilson, Britain's Prime Minister from 1964–70 and from 1974–76.

added attraction for tourists to visit the country. The Commonwealth also seemed to matter less, with the UK now in the EEC (European Economic Community), which later became the European Union (EU).

The Queen never gave her opinion on politics and treated all sides with the same politeness. She found Harold Wilson, the Labour Prime Minister, easy to get along with. He came to Balmoral in 1976 with his wife, Mary,
